A pioneer medical researcher and clinician in fields of hematology and oncology; played a central role in developing centrifuge and filtration techniques for platelet and white cell transfusions to support aggressive cancer chemotherapy. Received the Albert and Mary Lasker Award in 1972. Born in Sophia, Bulgaria, attended high school at the Catholic French College. Sent to a Nazi transit camp in 1943. The Bulgarian gov't refused deportation of Jews and in 1944 began medical school. He immigrated to Israel and in 1951 graduated from the 1st medical school class of Hebrew University. In 1964 invited by Dr. Sidney Farber to train in laboratory research and pediatric investigative medicine on a Harvard Fellowship at Childrens' Hospital of Boston Jimmy Fund Center. He became Director of Blood at Children's Hospital Philadelphia and achieved one of the earlier remissions of childhood leukemia. He was the first doctor to apply Factor 8 cryoprecipitate to children. In 1968 began treating adult patients at Misericordia and Fitzgerald Mercy Hospitals where he developed concept of a mini "cancer-center" that combined chemotherapy and the latest support care. In 1977 Villanova University awarded him an honorary doctorate. He founded the Djerassi-Elias Institute for cancer research at Tel Aviv University. He spoke philosophically about his career in medicine. "I'm not a very religious person, but there is something in the Jewish faith called 'tikun olam'. It means 'fix the world.' That is the reason a person is put on Earth. I believe in that. I have to fight to fix the world." See obituaries in The Philadelphia Inquirer Nov. 14 2011 and The Jewish Exponent Nov. 23 2011, pg. 34 Undertaker: Goldsteins' Rosenberg's Raphael-Sacks
